WELCOME

The National Forests are your forests. You own them and the United States Forest Service manages them for your benefit. The National Forests are held in trust for you and administered in accordance with the principle of "the greatest good for the largest number over the longest period of time."

National Forests contribute much to the welfare and prosperity of our nation. From them we get water for domestic needs and power for homes and industries. They furnish lumber for buildings and thousands of other wood products for our use. Cattle and sheep graze on the forage within their boundaries--providing food, leather, and wool.

Each year millions hunt, fish, hike, camp, and use picnic areas on the forest. Recreation is not a tangible value like wood, grass, or water. You can't build houses with it, feed it to livestock, or use it to run factories. But, it is important to your well-being and happiness and that importance is recognized by the Forest Service.

For administrative purposes, the United States has been divided into National Forest Regions. The Rocky Mountain Region (Region 2) includes Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, and Wyoming.

Each National Forest is administered by a Forest Supervisor. National Forests are divided into districts, each managed by a District Ranger. During the busy summer season, Forest Guards assist the Ranger with his work.

CAMPFIRES

Permits are not generally required on the National Forests; however, you will be asked not to build campfires in certain hazardous areas on these forests. In this way, you will be helping the Forest Service protect your forests. Campfire permits may be required during periods of extremely high fire danger. Except at posted forest camps, please check with the local Forest Officer to determine whether campfire permits are required.

BACK-COUNTRY CAMPS

This directory does not include less-accessible trail camps with rough accommodations provided by the Forest Service for fishermen, hunters, hikers, and other back-country travelers.

Information about wilderness areas and camps, and other information about the forest can be obtained at supervisor headquarters or ranger stations.

IF LOST, REMAIN CALM AND STAY WHERE YOU ARE

Remember the figure 3. Three blasts on a whistle, three regulated puffs of smoke, three shots from a gun, or three flashes of a mirror or flashlight repeated regularly will bring assistance.

The rescue party will answer with two signals. Repeat your distress signal until you are found.

If you must use signal fires, be sure to clean away the duff and ground litter to mineral soil - and extinguish the fire before you leave.

Before traveling through strange country, notify a Forest Officer of your approximate destination. Let him know when you return.

GOOD CAMPERS WILL:

1. Build fires only in designated places and completely extinguish them with water before leaving. Apply water slowly and directly to the fire in a rock stove to avoid cracking the structure. If the stove has a door, the fire need not be completely extinguished.

2. Burn all refuse possible and place remainder in the garbage receptacle.

3. Share facilities when camps are crowded.

4. Keep signs, buildings, tables, and other conveniences in good condition -- do not deface them.

5. Do not pick or dig flowers, plants, ferns, or moss in or near any forest camp. Do not cut tent poles or boughs or chip tree bark.

6. Do not clean fish or wash clothing in a lake or stream.

7. Do not shoot firearms in the campground or vicinity.

8. Do not shoot fireworks anywhere inside the National Forest.
